

Steel Reign

BAND STORY

The band came together in 2003, with the goal keeping the music we grew up with alive and kickin', with a slight alternative twist. Founders Maiman and Green met through their mutual interests of music and football, actually "meeting" online on the Steelers.com message board and chat room. They met face to face for the first time, after "talking" for several years through the afore mentioned forums, in August of 2003 at the Steelers training camp facilities where they were able to combine their love for the Pittsburgh Steelers by day and music by night, drawing in the occasional passerby as they jammed at their room's entryway (and once in a while making a sleeping neighbor pissed enough to call the front desk). Baros was brought on a short time later. He has been a life long friend of Maiman's and although the years since high school have separated them by miles, they have not separated them as friends. During the summer, Friday night backyard jam sessions have now become routine.

It has been a slow process because the band members live so far apart, Maiman in Illinois, Green in Pennsylvania and Baros in Wisconsin. To this point, everything recorded has been done via the internet.

The band released its first single in 2007. It was met with minor internet success but stirred their creative juices enough to keep trying to move forward.

Three years later, the group has been hanging tough but with no real forward movement and Drummer Scott Baros has become seriously ill and unable to perform.

Bassist Maiman and Guitarist Green continue to get together once a year in Latrobe PA to collaborate on new ideas and to get in some much needed jamming.

Recently, the band has started looking for another drummer to fill the void left by Baros' illness and stand out Scott Person, though young, has gotten their attention. No decisions have been made thus far, but it appears that the band may be able to take that next step forward soon if things work out.
