

darkblue man

BAND STORY

"

Up until the mid 90's I was a jobbing guitarist playing clubs and pubs for money, with very little time for recording and composing music. But, after a life changing visit to the Glastonbury Festival, decided I needed to do something different musically. In short, I fell in love with electronic music, or rather, the desire to create my own electronic music. I think it may have been artists like System 7, Eat Static, The Orb, Fluke and others that inspired my change of direction. Since then it's become more of an obsession than a hobby and I wouldn't want it any other way.

Of course, things have changed a lot since then. I remember paying a small fortune for my sampler, a Yamaha A 3000 with a whopping 32 megs of memory, LOL. Still got it. I occasionally play my old strat through it for it's on board FX which are still pretty cool for guitar. But most of my hardware has either been sold off or sits here in the studio looking pretty but getting little use these days, alas. That's progress I guess.

To be honest I think it's more the sound design, production and engineering side of music creation I love the most now, The "art of noise" as it were.

So there you have it..... feel free to hang around, have a listen and don't be shy.... tell me what you think.

"

STATS

Visits

1,999

Plays

537

Streams

526

Downloads

11

Featured Songs

1

No True Scotsman

Techno

2

Ten - 10

Drum
& Bass

LATEST NEWS

Bio

testing one two

For additional information please contact us
©2012 Indie Music Works | The source for Indie Music, Indie Artists and Listeners

